HISTORIC MAPS RELATING TO GRAPPENHALL HEYS

MAP 1<sup>1</sup>

The Parrs had been accumulating land for some years prior to building Grappenhall Heys. The purple indicates land belonging to the Parr family in Appleton but there is more to the north-east. Here the land extends into Grappenhall. This section of the Tithe Map has not been digitised. The house was built on the Grappenhall side of the parish boundary.

MAP 2

The 1875 OS map shows the house, stables and other outbuildings, along with the kitchen garden and glasshouses. A comparison with a modern map indicates that the layout of this area has been changed by the building of a road system and houses since the 1980s. More housing is planned to the north east of Grappenhall Heys. The footprint of the former house, together with formal and kitchen gardens, remains relatively unchanged. (See also the aerial view 4).

HISTORIC PHOTOGRAPHS

PHOTO 1<sup>3</sup>

View of house from the north-east with the drive from the west lodge. This photo suggests that the house overlooked parkland and fields rather than gardens. Trees and shrubs make up the planting.

PHOTO 2

This postcard<sup>4</sup> shows one of the ponds, probably in the pleasure garden next to the kitchen garden (though may have been in House Covert). Here 3 ponds were developed from the marl pits (indicated on the tithe map).

The terraces no longer have steps from one to the other (apart from one set down to the former bowling green) and are being eroded where people walk. Remains of a terrace may be seen running across the middle of the photo. |

The ha-ha which runs NW-SE along the back of the house.

On the drive looking west towards the site of the front of the house.

PHOTO 7

The east lodge close to Grappenhall village, looking along the route of the drive to Grappenhall Heys.

PHOTO 8

The restored kitchen garden buildings (potting shed, bothy, etc) at the back of the glasshouses.

PHOTO 9

The gateway the family would have used to gain access to the pleasure garden without passing through the kitchen garden. This lies to the west of the kitchen garden.

PHOTO 10

The former pleasure garden, now restored and open to the public. The kitchen garden is through the gate to the right and is separated from the pleasure garden by a yew hedge. The present day public entrance is at the far end of the path which leads between the ponds.

PHOTO 11

Entrance from the pleasure garden into the restored kitchen garden, looking along the Master's Walk. The stables and house were beyond the wall at the end of the walk.

PHOTO 12

In the former pleasure grounds to the north of the house, known as House Covert.
